Sith from the old republic

The Sith have long been the enemy of the Jedi in the Star Wars universe, but no fan can deny the awesome power they held. Force lightning, force choke, and unlimited power through passion and strength, the Sith looked unearh the dormant potential within each apprentice. Now, most Sith used their powers for horrible atrocities while others redeemed themselves through sacrifice, looking at you Darth Vader. Their power, through anger and strength, made them conquerors, unbeatable foes with loyalists standing behind them. Some were more powerful than others, but many held abilities considered to be unnatural. With that here are 10 Best Sith Lords from the Old Republic in Star Wars. 10 Darth Bane The sole survivor of the thousand-year war between the Jedi and the Sith, an entire millennium before the Clone Wars, Darth Bane endured in the wake of destruction. One of the best attributes of the Sith came from Darth Bane: The Rule of Two. "A master and an apprentice, no more, no less". Bane put this idea into motion after seeing firsthand the constant fighting between the Sith themselves. The Jedi saw this as a weakness and were able to wipe them out. Without the likes of Bane, it's likely the Sith may have never come to power again. With these plans carried onto the modern Sith seen in the Clone Wars, specifically to Darth Sidious, they were able to regain their former strength. 9 Darth Plagueis Revenge of the Sith may be caught in the endless hatred of the prequels, but the story of Darth Plagueis marked the beginning of the end for Anakin Skywalker. The story of the dark lord is shaped around his knowledge of immortality and manipulation of the midi-chlorians within him. During his research, he shared everything he knew with his apprentice, Darth Sidious. Once they achieved success, Sidious had acquired an apprentice of his own and had to adhere to the rule of two. Sidious killed Plagueis in his sleep having learned everything from him, including immortality. An unnatural ability indeed, Plagueis unlocked the very root of Anakin's fear which lead him to the dark side. 8 Darth Vitiate Also known as Tenebrae, Vitiate ruled for over 1500 years with his Sith empire. Frankly, Vitiate is a lot like Petyr Baelish, AKA Littlefinger, from Game of Thrones, who relied on knowledge and powers of manipulation to achieve success. With a lust for power at a young age, Vitiate was given the title of the new ruler of Medriaas after impressing the Sith Lord Marka Ragnos. This also gave him the opportunity to distance himself from the constant bickering and infighting of the sith lords, until he summoned all of them to meet only to drain their life essence for his own life longevity. Horrible? Yes, but ingenious at the same time as he amassed his own power to wipe out all who oppose him, just like Michael Corleone in The Godfather. 7 Ulic Qel Droma Like Darth Revan, Ulic Qel Droma played both sides of the table, acting as a Jedi Knight and a Sith Lord. In fact, fans got a brief glimpse of the Jedi/Sith in the Gamecube video game Star Wars: The Clone Wars. Towards the end, Ulic Qel Droma teaches Anakin how to defeat the Dark Reaper, a Sith ship with the power to drain the life force from anyone within a few feet of it. Outside of this, Droma looked to eliminate the sith by any means possible, even joining them to ensure their downfall. But after a rage-inducing poison was injected into him, he fell to the Dark side and rose as a Sith Lord. His will to do good was used against him and was reversed to commit the worst acts possible. 6 Ajunta Pall Some fans have boggled over the question of who the first dark lord of the Sith was, and now its finally answered. Ajunta Pall is given the honor (or dishonor) of being the first Sith lord after being exiled from the Jedi Order. After his studies in alchemy lead him to the discovery of creating life, the Jedi Order deemed his practice as an abomination and banished him. Good is certainly a point of view, with Ajunta Pall's motives being justifiable. His ambition and curiosity labeled him as a danger to the Jedi Order which begs the question, are the Jedi fearful of something becoming more powerful than them? 5 Marka Ragnos Like Ajunta Pall, Marka Ragnos's reign took part during the early days of the first Sith empire. His leadership was characterized by fear and he struck down anyone who opposed his right to the throne of the Sith. Think of him as the Joseph Stalin of Sith Lords; a lust for power and disregard for anyone below him. However, despite his ruthless reign, he did bring the Sith into what was called the Golden Age of the Sith, ridding them of their constant infighting and bickering. It's hard to hate someone as horrible as Marka Ragnos whose reign technically brought prosperity for a power and strength hungry people. 4 Naga Sadow As one of the most talented magicians amongst the Sith Lords, Naga Sadow's life was marked by a constant power struggle after the fall of Marka Ragnos. In fact, his political philosophy, rooted in expansionism, divided the Sith. While some were liberal with Sadow's political ideology, others were more conservative and fearful of the idea of expanding outside of their establishment. Unfortunately, the army he created would end up turning against him, leading to a life of exile no Yavin 4. He created temple complexes (As seen in New Hope) and practiced alchemy for the remaining decades of his life until Jedi Freedon Nadd killed him (who would later become a Sith himself). 3 Exar Kun Seduced by the dark side and a puppet of Freedon Nand, Exar Kun's hubris was his excessive confidence in his abilities as a Jedi. With a mission to find the tomb of the once-mighty Sith Lord Freedon Nadd, Kun found it with ease and was met with the spirit of the long-dead dark lord. However, Nadd had other plans and sought to use Kun's body as a conduit to reform his physical appearance. The two (as one) would go on to enslave the primitive people of Yavin 4 until Kun could endure no more. With hopes of performing a ritual that would free his body of Nadd's rule, Kun ended up killing himself in the process. 2 Darth Nihilus Darth Nihilus, known as the Lord of Hunger, was a consumer of force energy and possessed a ghost-like existence in the universe. His past is shaped by near annihilation at the hands of superweapon known as the Mass Shadow, which obliterated everything in its path. His revenge would come to fruition as Nihilus and his apprentice Darth Sion began a Jedi Purge. The reason for Darth Nihilus's popularity is rooted in the justification of his crimes, who sought revenge on those who took everything from him. The destruction of not only his planet but his entire body forced him to join the dark side to harness the power needed for revenge. Revenge may not always bring someone peace, but for Darth Nihilus it's hard not to sympathize. 1 Darth Revan Revan's notoriety is known throughout the galaxy with a cult following of loyalists and fans. Not only that, but Revan is one of the only force users on this list to act as a Sith Lord and a member of the Jedi Council. His efforts in the Mandalorian Wars alongside Malak (who later became Darth Malak) did not go unnoticed as they were hailed as heroes. But afterward, they descended into a mystery into an unknown religion and uncovered a secret army of the Sith. Their curiosity and passion got would be their downfall as they were brainwashed by the Sith. Fans have been craving a Darth Revan movie, but Lucasfilm has yet to announce any such project. Todos los derechos reservados. Half way through a new trilogy interlaced with stand-alone stories, Star Wars fans have never had it so good. At the risk of appearing greedy, one story I would love to see explored on the big screen is the Old Republic. Video gamers and graphic novel readers have enjoyed some experiences from this Expanded Universe era, set several millennia prior to the Galactic Republic as witnessed through the original trilogy and prequels. With a depth of history but shrouded in mystery, The Old Republic was a civilised time beset by the same old problems. Despite advancement of technology the culture still embraced older traditions, reminiscent of real world Knights, Jedi of the Old Republic adorned protective plates as part of their dress. While this armour might have provided some protective properties deflecting energy such as rogue laser blasts, this could not be relied upon when confronted with the penetrative power of a lightsaber as wielded by their Sith nemesis. However, with their Sith foes long thought lost to the stars, the Jedi could be forgiven for believing this dark cult was no longer posed a discernible threat. Whatever their reason, the knights armour provided a rather cool twist and spoiler when the chapters protagonists re-emerge, the Sith are rocking some armoured bling of their own. Inspired by this period I wanted to create a Jedi Knight or Sith Lord of the Old Republic. I tend to follow an organic process by raking through my fodder and piecing parts together, allowing them to evolve towards something creative and unique. The recipe for this custom formed quickly and is testament to 3 ¼ inch figure franchise cross-overs. I had a Star Wars Darth Vader lower torso with legs and a G.I. Joe Cobra Commander (armoured) upper torso, although I was missing section to connect the two. I found parts from a Han Solo figure, which I think was from one of his Bespin Capture figures. The Han Solo parts was a two part upper torso split into a bottom and top half, the lower of which proved a perfect partner with added bonus of its connecting plug fitting neatly into the G.I. Joe's upper torso. Before locking the Solo and Cobra upper and upper torsos together, I painted the Solo part with a matt black acrylic. I also sourced a pair of loose Grand Moff Trachta arms which just required a wee joint shortening, then fitted nicely into the G.I. Cobra torsos arm sockets. Previous to working on this figure, I was becoming more adventurous with my fabric use and didn't want to be confined by Hasbro spares such as the size of Darth Vader's capes and the cost would have been prohibitive. So I spent some time scouring the internet and reaching out to customising friends in an attempt to identify the material used by Hasbro, unfortunately to no avail. Unable to identify the material, I purchased a few materials on-line and in the process discovering on-line and off-line are worlds apart with the material being no use for my custom projects. To avoid further time and expense, I headed to a local fabric store and found a decent length of suitable material and for a good price in their off-cut bin. Cutting a few lengths of this material I formed a makeshift lower cape and being a fan of Darth Nihilus unkempt robes, I frayed the hems and was delighted with the look. These individual sections were attached to the front and back of my custom figure then secured in place with spots of glue and a belt. The Han Solo/G.I. Joe upper torso was then fitted to the Darth Vader lower torso and legs. The G.I. Joe upper torso had a hole in the centre of his back between his shoulder blades, probably for parts to the original figure. I used this hole as housing for a slim cape, cutting a length in a rectangular shape which dropped to the hem of his lower cape. Again fraying the edges before folding the top of the rectangle into a point, much the same as the first folds for a paper aeroplane. Some glue was spotted into the torsos hole and with help of a cocktail stick, the point of the cape was then fed into the hole and left to dry. A spare casted and menacing head, was painted with an acrylic matt grey to match the tone of Trachta's exposed shoulders. When dry, this was placed atop the figure. Things were looking good but I felt it needed a wee touch more in the menacing stakes, so I decided to create a hood. The hood was created from using a small off cut of the same fabric which was folded into a slightly oversized cone for his head. Sewing along the edge the hood was then turned inside out. Working the excess material shape into folds at either side of the hood's front with superglue to hold in place. When completed, I had a rather menacing Sith Lord custom with a removable fabric hood. Okay, my Star Wars knowledge is not very extensive but I've recently gotten interested in the Old Republic. I haven't read any of the EU or played any video games yet, so I'm sure I'm missing/overlooking stuff. Everything I know about the Old Republic is from reading or hearing about it online.It seems like the Sith from the Old Republic are more powerful than the Sith from the trilogies. It may be because I have only watched the movies though.Sidious and Dooku can use force lightning, I believe Sidious can also use force storm and force scream (not sure). Sidious was also able to hide himself from the Jedi. I forget if Grievous or Maul had similar or other abilities.It seems like the Sith from the Old Republic could honestly wreak more havoc and devastation with the force than those from the trilogies. Such as Vitiate, Revan, and Nihilus, although I know he is a wound in the force, so it may be different.I feel that Sidious and Dooku relied more on their intelligence and the corruption of the Republic, rather than raw force ability, which definitely benefited them in the long run. But I'm more focused on force abilities rather than strategy.I'm not sure if I am underestimating the abilities of the Sith from the trilogies, and overestimating those from the Old Republic, but that is what I have observed, but you guys can correct me if I'm wrong.Additionally, if the Sith from the trilogies had abilities I didn't list, could you guys tell me about them?Page 2 123 comments
