The chicken was clumped together and was very hard to pull apart. We tried to return it and the lady laughed in our face, so we told her to taste the chicken and she did not want to. We then showed her how the chicken was clumped by picking it up and she was like "why you touch it" and I was like "we were literally about to eat this and you're worried about us touching it." Turns out she wanted to resell it. Moral of the story dont eat there.
