Bhara Kahu Islamabad, Pakistan The single largest guide to achieving success never written, with a new preface of television star and entrepreneur Steve Harvey! Think and enrich, published the first time in 1937, it has more than twenty years of research to fill out. Napoleon Hill was a journalist and writer who later served as director of President Franklin D. Roosevelt from 1933 to 1936. His great opportunity came with his interview by Andrew Carnegie in 1908. Intrigued by Carnegiea s statement that The road to success could be divided into a simple but complete formula, Hill has accepted Carnegiea S challenge for the study and interview more than five hundred greatly successful people to determine what their vast achievements.This masterwork had to identify thirteen Principles that every person should adopt if they are really achieved everyone is empirically based in decades mentioned above. Hill synthesized what the rich and / or exceptionally successful individuals have in common. This classic guide is one of the best-selling books of all time, having sold twenty million copies of death Hilla S in 1970. With fire razor, desire, persistence and perseverance you too can add artists of Thomas caliber Edison, Henry Ford, and Andrew Carnegie. In truth, "thoughts are things", and powerful things in that, when they are clearly mixed with intent, persistence, and a burning desire for their translation into wealth, or other material objects. A little more than thirty years ago, Edwin C. Barnes has discovered how true it is that men really thinks and enrich. The discovery of him did not come up in a single session. He came little by little, starting with a burning desire to become a business partner of the Grande Edison. One of the main characteristics of Barnes' desire was that definitive Wasa. He wanted Worka served Edison, known he hat. Observing, carefully, the description of how it went to translate the desire of him actually, and we will have a better understanding of the thirteen principles that lead to wealth. When this desire, or impulse of thought, first flashed in him he was unable to act on it. Two difficulties were in a way of him. He didn't know Mr. Edison, and he didn't have enough money to pay his train ticket to Orange, New Jersey. These difficulties were enough for having discouraged most men from making any attempt to achieve desire. But he was not a common desire! It was so determined to find a way to make him desire to him that he finally decided to travel in "blind luggage", rather than being defeated. (For those who didn't know it, this means that he went to East Orange on a freight train). He showed up at Mr. Edison's laboratory, and announced that he had come to enter business with the inventor. Speaking of the first meeting between Barnes and Edison, later, Mr. Edison said, "He didn't fit me, looking like an ordinary wanderer, à, but there was something in the expression of his face, which carried the impression that he was determined to get what he had come later. I had learned, from years of experience with men, than when a one He really wants something so deeply that he is willing to point all his future on a single wheel ride to get it, it's sure to win. I gave him the opportunity he asked, because I saw that he had decided to be in mind until he didn't succeed. Next events showed that no error was made. "Only what young Barnes said to Mr. Edison on that occasion was much less important than what he thought. Edison, himself, he said! He could not have been the young woman's appearance his beginning in Edison's office because it was definitely against him. It was what he thought he counted. If the meaning of this statement could be sent to every person who reads it, there would be no need for the rest of this book. Barnes did not have his partnership With Edison on his first interview. He had the chance to work in Edison offices, in a very nominal salary, doing the job he was not important to Edison, but the most important for Barnes, because he gave him a Opportunities to view its "goods" where its "partner" expected could see it. The months passed. Apparently nothing happened to bring the objective scope that Barnes had established in his mind as his main purpose. But he was happening something important. In the mind of Barnes. He was constantly intensifying his desire to become the associate business of Edison. Psychologists said correctly that "when one is really ready for one thing, he looks like him". Barnes was ready for a company association with Edison, moreover, he was determined to stay ready until he got what he was looking for. He didn't tell himself, "ah well, what's use? I guess he would change idea and look for a seller's work." But, he said: "I came here to go to business with Edison, and realized this extremity if he takes the rest of my life." We meant! What a different story would have done that men should say if they only have adopted a defined purpose and bear this purpose until he would have had time to become an obsession from all applicants! Perhaps the young Barnes did not know at that moment, but the determination of him of the bulldog, his persistence in the back standing of a single desire, was destined to cut all the opposition and bring him the opportunity he was looking for. When the opportunity has arrived, he appeared in a different form, and from a different direction from Barnes was scheduled. This is one of the opportunities tricks. He has a suction habit to slide from the back door, and often crossed in the form of bad luck or temporary defeat. Perhaps this is why so many cannot recognize opportunities. Mr. Edison had just completed a new office device, known at that time, like the Edison's detachment machine (now Ediphone). The sellers of him were not enthusiastic about the car. They didn't believe that he could be sold without great effort. Barnes saw the opportunity of him. He had crawled in silence, hidden in a strangling machine that interested nobody but Barnes and the inventor. Barnes knew he could sell Edison's home machine. He suggested to Edison and promptly got him the opportunity for him. He sold the car. In fact, he sold him so successfully that Edison gave him a contract to distribute and market it throughout the nation. From that company association grew the slogan, "realized by Edison and installed by Barnes". The corporate alliance has been in operation for more than thirty years. Outside it Barnes has made rich in money, but he did something infinitely greater, he showed that one can really "think and become rich". How many actual cash that the original desire of barnes "is worth for him, I have no way of Perhaps it took two or three million dollars, but the amount, whatever it is, becomes insignificant when compared with the greatest resource that has acquired in the form of defined knowledge that an intangible impulse of thought can be transmuted in its physical application counterpart of known principles.
