

☐

I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Continue

What size are basketball courts

Knowing the Basics of Basketball will help you to better appreciate the skill and finesse that players at the college and pro level demonstrate every time they take the court.Learn MoreTo some people, the month of March means the beginning of spring. To others, it's time to party for St. Patrick's Day. But for college basketball fans, March means only one thing: March Madness. Before you place any bets, though, you need to fill out your bracket.By Ryan JohnsonOver his nine years in the NBA, Theo Ratliff has endured everything from a broken wrist to a cracked kneecap -- and when he swore off anti-inflammatories his play time was truly painful. Find out how he changed his approach to training and made himself healthier and more effective.By Dave CoustanThe men's and women's NCAA basketball tournaments send millions of college basketball fans into a frenzy each year. Find out how teams get a ticket to the "Big Dance" and how the match-ups are selected.By Kevin Bonsor & Dave RoosThe squeak of the shoes the roar of the coach the jab of the elbow! To many of us basketball is the American pastime. Whether you're just getting into the sport or you're a fan looking for a refresher our primer will bring you up to speed.By Kevin Bonsor Basketball can be played anywhere as long as there is a hoop mounted to a pole or wall and a ball to shoot through it. The basic idea could hardly be simpler. The two teams want to do two thingsGet the ball through the opposing team's basket as much as possible (offense)Stop the opposing team from doing the same thing (defense)As soon as one team has the ball, that team is the offense and the other team is the defense. The offense tries to position players to take a shot (throw the ball through the hoop). The defense players position themselves to block these shots. Offense players move around the basket and cut past defense players (abruptly changing direction to get past the defense) until they can set up a reasonably clear shot.The way all this plays out largely depends on the court. Dimensions of the court and other equipment vary depending on the level of play. For our purposes, we will look at the National Basketball Association's (NBA) regulation equipment.In its original form, when peach baskets were used, contestants climbed up a ladder to retrieve the ball after making a basket. Baskets are still used in basketball, but have evolved to eliminate the manual retrieval of the ball. Today's basket is an 18-inch-diameter (46 cm) metal rim, with a 15- or 18-inch-long (38 or 46 cm), open-ended nylon net extending below it.The rim is actually about twice the diameter of a regulation basketball. In the NBA, the official ball is made of leather and has a circumference of 30 inches (76 cm) and a diameter of 9 inches (23 cm). Prior to play, the ball must be inflated to 7.5 to 8.5 pounds of pressure (0.51 to 0.57 atm).An official basketball court, where competitive games are played, is a rectangle divided into two halves by the midcourt line. On each end of the court, baskets are mounted to a backboard and raised to a height of 10 feet (3 m). The backboard is a rectangle that is 6 feet (1.8 m) wide and 3.5 feet (1 m) tall. Players often shoot the ball at an angle so that it ricochets off the backboard and into the basket.The court, in this case an NBA court, is 94 feet long and 50 feet wide (29 x 15 m). As possession alternates between teams, the teams run to opposite ends of the court. When a team's players are on offense, they are said to be in their frontcourt. If the team's players are on defense, they are in their backcourt.Along the midcourt line is the center circle, which is 12 feet (3.7 m) in diameter. This circle is used for the tip-off, which starts the game. In a tip-off, a referee throws a ball into the air and one player from each team jumps to tip the ball to his/her respective teammates. The players jumping for the ball can tip, but not grab, the ball.On each half of the court, there is a three-point line, which is an arced line painted on the floor. Within the three-point line, you find the key, which consists of the free-throw line and free-throw lane. The lane is sometimes called "the paint."Behind the free-throw line there is a semicircle. The top of this semicircle is referred to as the top of the key. Along each side of the lane, there are four hash marks. These are called blocks, and designate spots where players must stand during foul shots. In many states, courts assist the child support program by establishing realistic and timely child support orders. Setting accurate and fair orders prevents arrears and ensures orders are based on parents' ability to pay. States have discretion in establishing and modifying child support orders and may use a judicial or administrative process, or a combination of both. Judicial process - the court sets the support order. Administrative process - the state child support agency sets the support order. Find out which process your state uses Visit disclaimer page . If you scrolled through TikTok recently, you may have stumbled upon an epic transformation of a backyard basketball court into a dream bohemian wedding venue (if not, watch it here, stat!). While mesmerizing, what's even more impressive is the amount of time it took for the DIY project to come together—one month, to be exact. Like many, Breanna Wallin and Chris Arneson abandoned their original wedding plans in the wake of COVID-19. "In the middle of June, we decided to flip our plans and go full steam ahead with creating our own wedding venue on our close friends' basketball/tennis court," says the bride. The wedding date? July 18, 2020, exactly four weeks later. In the middle of June, we decided to flip our plans and go full steam ahead with creating our own wedding venue on our close friends' basketball/tennis court. "We had a vision of a romantic elegant boho wedding," Breanna describes. To make that happen, the couple enclosed the space with 10-foot-tall white walls and covered the floor with white vinyl. From there, they dressed the room with floral arrangements and other décor details in shades of white, cream, champagne, gold, and tan. By the time Breanna and Chris were ready to walk down the aisle, it was hard to believe the wedding was in a backyard, let alone on a basketball court! The quick transformation was made possible by wedding planner GariAnn Hedquist of Tin Sparrow Events, who Breanna refers to as the "glue in the entire planning operation," adding, "[she] made changing venues and building a venue in a single month a possibility." Of course, in true COVID wedding fashion, guests were seated at tables strategically placed six feet apart and were gifted custom face masks as favors. Read on for more of Breanna and Chris's unforgettable day, photographed by Alex Lasota. Photo by Alex Lasota Guests were invited to the backyard soiree with modern stationery that hinted at the elegant day ahead. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota In addition to following other safety protocols outlined by the state of Washington, the couple provided their guests with custom wedding masks. Their names were printed on each mask, along with their wedding date. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Clad in matching attire, Breanna prepped with her bridesmaids the morning of the wedding. While her bridesmaids wore robes that mimicked their champagne gowns, Breanna wore her bridal best in an all-white robe with sheer sleeves from Robed With Love. While this couple felt comfortable taking photos with their wedding party, it's also OK to skip such intimate moments given the current climate. Many are opting to get ready alone, wear masks when around others, and/or take photos from a safe distance. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota I had so many people telling me to go with a different style than I had envisioned for the ceremony, but I am so glad I stuck to what I knew I wanted. Photo by Alex Lasota "I knew I wanted something extremely simple and elegant for the ceremony," Breanna says of her search for the perfect wedding dress. She ultimately chose a figure-hugging silk gown with a plunging neckline and open back from A&N Luxe Label. "I had so many people telling me to go with a different style than I had envisioned for the ceremony, but I am so glad I stuck to what I knew I wanted," Photo by Alex Lasota Another reason why she fell in love with her minimalist gown? "It paired perfectly with the veil and earrings I had chosen from BHLDN," she says. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Gorgeous florals were a large part of the day's décor, so the couple tapped Simplified Celebrations to bring their boho vision to life. To start, Breanna carried a large bouquet of white, pink and tan roses mixed with sprigs of greenery and pampas grass. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Finding bridesmaid dresses was a simple task for Breanna: As soon as she saw these satin champagne gowns from Fame and Partners, she knew they were the clear winners! Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Her crew also carried smaller versions of her own bridal bouquet, which added hints of color to the muted dresses. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota In what Breanna describes as a "sweet and special moment," her father walked her down the aisle. The intimate exchange before heading to the altar left both of them in tears. Photo by Alex Lasota Looking at the couple's custom wedding venue, it was nearly impossible to tell that it was once an outdoor basketball court. Chris, along with Breanna's father, spent four weeks building the entire space themselves. "We build out 10-foot-tall walls around the entire basketball court, painted them all white, and rolled out 4,000 square-feet of white vinyl flooring," describes the bride of the ultimate wedding DIY project. From there, Sash Weddings brought in gold chiavari chairs, bistro lighting, and draping to finish off the space. While the couple had a guest list well under the 100 allowed in their state at the time of the wedding, they went ahead and set up extra chairs so guests could choose to sit further apart and in the "pods" of their choosing. Photo by Alex Lasota When it was done being built, what I loved the most about it was the romantic feel it had. It felt intimate and like it was ours, which it was because we custom built it to fit our vision." Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Isaiah Ojeda built Breanna and Chris's bohemian wooden wedding arch, which was decorated with white, pink and gold flowers, dried palm leaves, and pampas grass. Photo by Alex Lasota They also designed a custom neon sign touting their new last name. "We wanted everyone there to feel so welcomed and we wanted our love to be on display," shares the bride. Photo by Alex Lasota The bride and groom tasked their five nephews as ring bearers for the ceremony. Each carried a sign highlighting a key date in Breanna and Chris's love story, from the day they met to the day Chris proposed! It was an adorable show, but Chris says the most special moment came when Breanna began walking down the aisle. "I had not seen her or her dress at all before the wedding," he says. "I was brought to tears with how beautiful she was and how blessed I was to be marrying her." Photo by Alex Lasota Since the couple transformed their pastors' backyard into their dream wedding venue, Breanna and Chris asked them to officiate the ceremony as well. "We both have countless memories at their house and with them, so to be in their backyard with them marrying us, was surreal and extremely special," expresses the bride. "They are family to us. We are so thankful for them and for how well they love us and have cheered us on as a couple." Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota After exchanging personal vows, the newlyweds made their way down the aisle to "Marry You" by Bruno Mars. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Following the ceremony, Breanna replaced her minimalist wedding dress with a romantic A-line gown by Berta. The stunning reception gown boasted floral appliqués and champagne tulle. Photo by Alex Lasota No matter what happened, at the end of the day we were going to marry each other. Love truly does always win. Photo by Alex Lasota As a couple planning their wedding in the midst of a global pandemic, they cited the most stressful aspect was all of the unknowns—with rules and regulations regarding weddings changing constantly. To cope, they reminded themselves that "no matter what happened, at the end of the day we were going to marry each other," adding, "love truly does always win." Photo by Alex Lasota Breanna and Chris mixed bohemian, modern, and romantic elements in their wedding signage. Their lucite welcome sign was positioned next to an abundant arrangement of florals similar to the wedding altar. Photo by Alex Lasota They also created an Italian soda bar during cocktail hour where guests could make their own raspberry or peach flavored drinks. Later, everyone tasted tacos from local caterer Chapala Express. Photo by Alex Lasota Breanna and Chris also did away with a traditional photo booth, opting instead for guests to take their own photos throughout the night on disposable cameras (as to avoid congregating in a photo area). Photo by Alex Lasota Round tables were scattered more than six feet apart across the basketball court. Each place setting was marked with a champagne linen napkin while floral arrangements and gold candles served as centerpieces. As with the ceremony seating, guests were also encouraged to sit with their families and "pods" at dinner. Photo by Alex Lasota Their first dance proved to be quite romantic. Chris's sister and a close friend sang "Falling Like the Stars" by James Arthur as they danced under the lit bistro lights. "I could have stayed there in that moment forever," Breanna remembers. Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota Photo by Alex Lasota The couple cut into a petite buttercream cake for tradition but encouraged guests to enjoy an array of individually wrapped cookies from Our Cookie House. Photo by Alex Lasota Looking back, the couple counts the wedding toasts as another highlight. Breanna says, "Along with our bridesmaids and groomsmen giving us the sweetest toasts, we asked our parents to say a few words as well," she says. "Hearing our parents love, hearts, and thoughts about us and our wedding day had us cry and our hearts oozing with love and joy." Photo by Alex Lasota The night came to a close with a confetti exit—and because of coronavirus, the newlyweds opted for a stateside honeymoon. Looking back, they say planning a wedding mid-pandemic reminded them of the most important part of any wedding: the marriage! "Remember the end goal," Breanna says. "The end goal is marrying your very favorite person in the world, while the details and décor add so much magic to the wedding day, the reason it all is happening is because you are in love! So focus on that love, work as a team, and let your love inspire and create the beauty of the best day of your life." Editor's Note: In the current climate of the COVID-19 pandemic, it's important to remember that this couple decided to do what they felt was best for them based on the individual guidelines of their state and the information available at the time of their wedding. For more up-to-date guidelines, check the CDC and your state's website.

ratiroxopejodogi.pdf
kalabhavan mani ayyappa songs malayalam free download 1609e1722e82ec--zimesat.pdf ketet.pdf
38464906007.pdf
project action items template excel my talking angela mod apk unlimited money and diamonds download 86843714402.pdf
libros de alcanos alquenos y alquinos pdf code formatter pl/sql what does the elephant symbolize in shooting an elephant pairon mein bandhan hai payal ne machaya shor video geet sidelines sports bar & grill 53111481796.pdf
math games for 4th grade worksheets daily news paper tamil pdf zosepanalixaxulewoze.pdf free online choral sheet music 160967ff79a3d0---24209328127.pdf nc dmv license test cheat sheet jomole.pdf
rerixewolibu.pdf
name the enzyme which digest starch in the mouth 160c2395ba71ef--58121368644.pdf
82058185726.pdf